

What is your biggest educational challenge?

The majority of readers who answered Momentum's online survey on education and MS said that fatigue was their biggest educational challenge, followed by cognitive issues.

Most people said that meeting with their instructors and discussing their needs was the most effective way to manage MS-related issues. "Being open and fully communicating what MS is helps educate faculty and classmates on the disease," said one student. "It actually helped me raise money for the yearly Walk MS in my area!"

Back to "A great education—with MS"