

Inspire others with your connections

“I connect because my mom is my hero,” says Lindsey (right), who was diagnosed in 2009, with her mother, Judy, diagnosed in 1998.

Get involved in MS Awareness Week by sharing your connections and telling others why you connect.

The power and possibilities of our connections to each other continue to drive the MS movement forward. During MS Awareness Week, March 3-9, you can help raise awareness of the disease. Share your story at MSconnection.org by creating and uploading a personal image that represents your connections and tells others why you connect. Then, share the image with your network via Facebook, Twitter, email or any other tool you use. It is your story that inspires others to join the movement and moves us closer to a world free of MS.

Upload your connection images at MSconnection.org.
