

MS research hot off the press

At the world's largest gathering dedicated to MS research, more than 8,500 scientists presented the latest findings from the quest to stop MS disease activity, restore function and end MS forever. These included more than 1,000 presentations and display posters with topics ranging from trial results for emerging therapies to nervous system repair and rehabilitative strategies, as well as a special announcement of the first research projects launched by the international Progressive MS Alliance.

Look for an article in the Spring issue of Momentum describing three of these projects.

To read research highlights and more, go to nationalmssociety.org/ectrims.